We are pleased to announce that the

Sixth International Colloquium

“Discourse, representations, argumentation”

will take place in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil from the 16th to 18th of August 2017

“Different perspectives on the same issues: discourse and interdisciplinarity” is the theme of the upcoming Sixth International Colloquium “Discourse, Representations, Argumentation”, sponsored by Communalis - International Communication and Natural Logic Society.

Reaching consensus on the status of discursive objects with regards to language and its relationships with thought processes through communication seems quite unlikely. The surprising crossing of multiple methods of analysis in many non-mathematical disciplines that came to light since the nineteenth century (sociology, psychology, education, communication, language sciences, etc.) only further complicates the resolution of this issue. However, one must admit that most approaches –rooted in the problem of inter, multi or transdisciplinarity– converge towards the core question of making sense of 'discourse' which, on the one hand, gradually moves away from its attachment to the notion of 'text' as being engendered by the verbal-oral couple and, on the other, go on the direction of discursive multimedialization. This is the complex debate that Communalis wants to encourage during the 2017 colloquium.
