The So.Re.Com. THEmatic NETwork Scientific Activities Upcoming International Events 2017-2018

Thanks to the announcement received by Risa Permanadeli (Indonesia), we are pleased to disseminate information about the

VI International Seminar on *Political and economic self-constitution: Citizenship activity and education

that will take place at the University of Warmia and Mazury

5 June 2018 - Olsztyn, Poland

The VI edition of the seminar is focused on citizenship activity and education taking into consideration that we currently live in times of changes which are often forced by citizenship society through citizenship activity. It is impossible to overestimate the roles of both formal and informal education in such processes which will be discussed during the seminar in interdisciplinary perspective applying academic and practical approaches.

- Short articles guidelines: 1200 – 1500 words, please avoid footnotes, figures and bibliography. References should be inserted in the text (surname, year). On the top of abstracts: authors' name and surname, scientific degree, title, position, affiliation.

Upcoming International Conferences 2017-2018

Thanks to the announcement received by Dan Stokols (University of Irvine, California, USA), we are pleased to inform that the

IAPS25 Conference:

Transitions to sustainability, lifestyles changes and human wellbeing: cultural, environmental and political challenges

will take place at the University of Roma Tre
8-13 July 2018 - Rome, Italy

The theme of the 25th IAPS 2018 Rome Conference follows coherently with the themes of the last Conferences in Lund/Älarp, Timisoara, Glasgow and Leipzig. The theme of the last IAPS conference underlined the importance of the everyday life contexts to understand people-environment relations. In Rome 2018 we will go further along this thematic stream, and focus on the transition processes needed to achieve more sustainable societies at the global, regional and local level. The theme we propose is therefore referred to the “Transitions to sustainability, lifestyles and human wellbeing: cultural, environmental and political challenges”.

To achieve a significant shift towards a more sustainable relation between humans and their daily life environments, the need of a radical lifestyle change is increasingly recognized, at the scientific, political and public opinion level. The transition to a low-carbon, more inclusive and open society has already started, under the push of different democratic instances and driving forces. To sustain this transition, and to manage the related cultural, economic and political processes, people-environment studies have a fundamental role to play. The integrated contribution of the different scientific disciplines, with the diversity of approaches, theories, and methods that are traditionally hosted within the IAPS community, represents an opportunity and a tool to understand this dynamics and, in turn, to help decision makers in improving policy and governance instruments to face these challenges.

Therefore, the conference works will focus around these issues, and will try to address important questions in this domain, such as, for example: How can we realize transitions towards sustainability in the real world? What are drivers, triggers, instruments – but also the obstacles and limits to these transitions? Which is the role of the key actors and networks to advance sustainability transitions in practice: individuals, groups, communities, and institutions? How can scientific results impact societal challenges in practice, and how can we provide effective and evidence-based knowledge about the fundamental role of people-environment studies in this process? What concrete examples and best-practices can we look at, for helping sustainability transitions towards a low-carbon and more inclusive society? Which role can real-world and laboratory experiments play to change our lifestyles and increase our pro-environmental behavior?

Editorial News

We are pleased to announce the publication of Prof. Denise Jodelet's new book entitled Representações Sociais e mundos de vida (PUCPRESS - ISBN: 978-85-68324-90-5).

The book, edited by prof. Nikos Kalampalikis, is the portuguese translation of the book Représentations sociales et mondes de vie and gathers some of Denise Jodelet's – an essential figure in the field of social representations – main writings. The book gives an overview of the developments of an empirical and reflective research practice which, carried out for thirty years, has opened new perspectives in the examination of sensitive questions of our world, directly relevant to social psychology. There is an original contribution on the representative phenomena examined from several points of view.

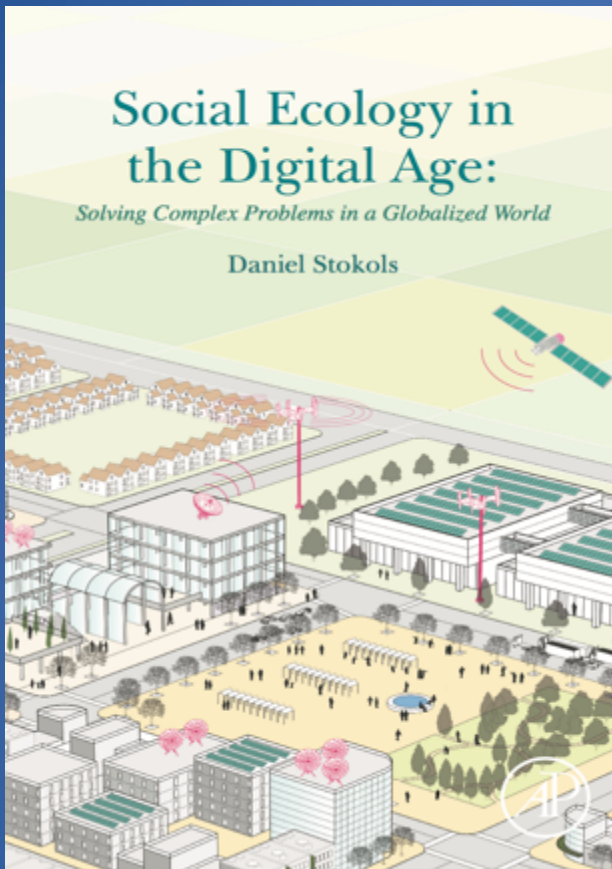

From the epistemological point of view, in their relation to the contributions of the social sciences. From the point of view of their social character, in the analysis of the socio-cognitive processes involved in their construction. From the point of view of their social relevance, in the understanding of the symbolic processes linked to social belonging and the common development of historically and culturally situated individuals and collectives. From the angle of application, in the examination of problems concerning memory, urban, health, body, gender, environment. From the point of view of proposals for future research, in the exploration of psychological dimensions still little considered by studies on social representations: alterity, experience, subjectivity, imagination, affectivity and emotions.

The book was launched during the XIII EDUCERE Conference held in Curitiba on the 28-31 August (<http://educere.pucpr.br/>).

Editorial News

We are pleased to announce the publication of Prof. Dan Stokols' new book entitled Social Ecology in the Digital Age - Solving Complex Problems in a Globalized World (Academic Print - ISBN: 9780128141885 - <https://www.elsevier.com/books/social-ecology-in-the-digital-age/stokols/978-0-12-803113-1>).

The book provides a comprehensive overview of social ecological theory, research, and practice. Written by renowned expert Daniel Stokols (U.C.I. USA), the book distills key principles from diverse strands of ecological science, offering a robust framework for transdisciplinary research and societal problem-solving. The existential challenges of the 21st Century - global climate change and climate-change denial, environmental pollution, biodiversity loss, food insecurity, disease pandemics, inter-ethnic violence and the threat of nuclear war, cybercrime, the Digital Divide, and income inequality confronting billions each day, cannot be understood and managed adequately from narrow disciplinary or political perspectives. Social Ecology in the Digital Age is grounded in scientific research but written in a personal and informal style from the vantage point of a former student, current teacher and scholar who has contributed over four decades to the field of social ecology. The book will be of interest to scholars, students, educators, government leaders and community practitioners working in several fields including social and human ecology, psychology, sociology, anthropology, criminology, law, education, biology, medicine, public health, earth system and sustainability science, geography, environmental design, urban planning, informatics, public policy and global governance.
